

The Division of Feminist Criminology is providing a Graduate Fellowship for the Study of Gender and Crime for 2024 in honor of Larry Siegel and his contributions and dedication to both the field and the division. The award is designed to recognize an exceptional graduate student in the field of gender and crime.

The division will give one graduate student a one-time award in the amount of $5,000 to support a project involving original research, program or service development, implementation, and/or evaluation, or advocacy. In order to be eligible, the student must be the leader or principal investigator on the project.

Budget items that will be supported include, but are not limited to, data collection, data purchases, hardware/software purchases, travel (e.g., to archives or for other data collection purposes, to professional development workshops or conferences, etc.), promotional or program materials, office supplies, and/or salary support/research assistance salary. No indirect costs, please.

The award will be given based on the following criteria:

1. originality of the proposed project,
2. potential of the project to inform gender and crime research, theory, or practice, and
3. feasibility of the proposed project, including the budget and timeline for completion.

Am I Eligible to Apply?

In order to be eligible to apply, a graduate student must be:

1. currently enrolled (full or part time) in an accredited masters or doctoral program in the United States (this includes law school),
2. in good academic standing,
3. leader or principal investigator on the project,
4. engaged in a project in the United States on a topic relevant to US gender and crime or with the United States included in a comparative context (e.g., cross-national research), and
5. if not already a student member of the Division of Feminist Criminology, it is expected that the winner will join the division upon receipt of the award.

How Can I Apply?

To apply, please submit the following materials as one PDF document no later than September 27, 2024 to Vera Lopez (Vera.Lopez@asu.edu) and Shavonne Arthurs (sarthurs@setonhill.edu):

1. description of proposed project (with a cover page), including the following sections:
 - a. purpose of project (e.g., statement of problem/issue),
 - b. background (e.g., literature review, need for project),
 - c. goals/objectives (e.g., what will be accomplished, potential limitations of project),
 - d. implementation plan, including methodology if research focused, and

- e. deliverables (e.g., dissertation, presentation, services, webinar, etc.),
2. proposed budget, justification for budget items, and project timeline,
3. current curriculum vitae,
4. transcript from current institution, and
5. letter of nomination from at least one permanent, full-time faculty member at the student's current institution

Application materials should appear in the following order in the PDF document:

1. Proposal (description and budget)
2. CV
3. Transcript
4. Letter

Please title your complete application document "DFCGS_Lastname_Firstname_Application.pdf". Reference letters should be titled using the same format: "DFCGS_Lastname_Firstname_Letter.pdf".

Items #1 - #2 must total no more than ten (10) double-spaced pages, not including cover page and references.

Winners will be notified by October 2024, and will be expected to submit a one-page annual activity statement no later than November 1st each year until the project is completed.

Clarification of Differences in Criteria for the Graduate Fellowship for the Study of Gender and Crime and the Feminist Criminology Graduate Research Scholarship Awards:

Scholars may apply for both awards, but will not be able to win both. Please submit separate applications and note the criteria for each award carefully. The Graduate Fellowship accommodates research along with program or service development, implementation, and/or evaluation, or advocacy, whereas the Feminist Criminology Graduate Research Scholarship accommodates research exclusively. The Graduate Fellowship is only for US applicants, whereas the Feminist Criminology Graduate Research Scholarship is for applicants based within and outside the USA. The Graduate Fellowship allows for US-based as well as cross-national research with the United States included in a comparative context. The Feminist Criminology Graduate Research Scholarship accommodates all forms of international research as well as US-based research.
